

Yiorgos Chouliaras is a Greek poet and essayist who works as Director of the Press & Communication Office and Press Counsellor at the Embassy of Greece. He has previously served at the Greek Embassies in Washington, D.C. and in Ottawa, Canada, in Boston, in Athens during the Olympic Games, and at the Greek Permanent Representation Press & Communication Office at the United Nations.

Born in Thessaloniki and educated at Anatolia College, Reed College, and The Graduate Faculty, New School for Social Research, he lived for many years in New York, where he also worked as a university lecturer, advisor to cultural institutions, and correspondent.

He is the author of Roads of Ink and five previous volumes of poetry in Greek as well as numerous essays – in Greek and in English – on literature, cultural history, and international relations. Reviews of and translations from his work have been published in leading periodicals, including Agenda, Grand Street, Harvard Review, Modern Poetry in Translation, Ploughshares, Poetry, and World Literature Today. An excerpt from his memoir America Is No Longer Here is included in Greece: A Traveler's Literary Companion.

A founding editor of the influential Greek literary & arts reviews Tram and Hartis and an editor of literary and scholarly periodicals in the United States, he was the third writer from Greece, after Odysseus Elytis and George Savidis, to serve on the jury of the Neustadt International Prize for Literature. An Emeritus Member of the Board of the Ottawa International Writers Festival, he was elected and served on the Executive Board of the Hellenic Authors' Society as Vice President for international relations.

Translations from his work are accessible at www.poetica.net.com and elsewhere, while a 2005 interview in English is also accessible online and attached here for convenience. (A recent interview in Greek, "Modern Greece is an outcome of poetry," is accessible at <http://icp-forum.gr/wp/?p=1460>.)
